THE PYGMY EARTH.

Vast Dimensions of the Sun as Compared With the World. A dime held at arm's length from the eye will much more than cover the entire disk of the sun. If it were placed at the exact point of coincidence and its diameter and distance from the eye accurately measured, it might be used as a means of determining the sun's diameter, his distance being known. The foremost philosophers of long ago would have been appalled at the true statement of both the sun's distance and its size. The sun's diameter is about $66,000 miles. It is bewildering to be assured that it would take 1,300,000 carths to equal the sun in volume. If the interior of that truly gigantic globe were hollow and the earth were placed at its center with the moon revolving about it at its usual mean distance of nearly and in 240,000 miles, there would still exist a is loss of flesh and gradual running down vaculty between the moon and the in- of the closing shell of the sun of nearly 200. 000 miles. This is perhaps the most graphic and impressive Illustration possible of the sun's colossal bulk. We must note, however, that the density that of the earth, so that it would weigh only as much as 330,000 earths. weight may be stated at two octillion tons, which if expressed in figures would require almost as many ciphers as a newspaper line can accommodate.

as compared with the snn is to represent the latter by a globe two feet in diameter and the earth by a dainty And yet the little pea weighs more than six quintillion tons. As to the solar surface, it is some 12,000 times that of our planet. Yet the sun when compared with its true peers, the stars, is not only of extraordinary size, but in all probability is only to be ranked among the medium self luminous bodies which sparkle in "heaven's ebon vault." And because of its spottedness it has a place, although a humble one, among the "variable" City back to his farm in town.

tlers in the New World.

As early as 1039 the Dutch settlers at Kingston, N. Y., erected with their own hands a little church building and dedicated it the following year. When a regular minister arrived from Holhind the same year, writes Mrs. Nellie Urner Wallington In "Historie Churches of America," he found himself a domlate with a membership of but sixteen souls and a selary pald in wheat. A profitable retail granite and marble which was then legal tender among these bumble titlers of the soil.

In 1604 a bell was imported and gave such pleasure to the members of the little parish that they used it to nunounce the hours for meals for the farmers of the neighborhood.

The observance of one qualit custom was reminiscent of their former life in Holland-the announcement by the gray baired sexton between the rimping of the first and last church bells that the hour for service had ar-

From door to door he traveled, rap-ped foudly and cried, "Church time!" Notices of all kinds, whether of funerals, christenings, weddings or merrymakings, were handed first to the sexton, who in turn mave them to the clerk, who stuck them on the end of the bumboo pole which he kept for that purpose and reached them up to the dominie.

At the termination of the service, as in other Dutch churches, the descons took up the collection with long poles having little velvet bags hung on the ends and a tinkling bell to wake the sleepers to the responsibilities of a contribution.
